

FOR BRIDAL PARTY

Conventionally Correct Apparel
Should Be Worn.Souvenirs in Memory of Occasion Are Presented to Ushers, Best Man and Bridesmaids.

The costumes which may be worn by the entire bridal party are of such infinite variety that it would be impossible in this brief account to give them all, says a writer in Good Housekeeping, but it is always safe, to follow the conventionally correct descriptions given here.

The bride is always dressed in white tulle, chiffon, satin, or what is very new—cloth of silver, trimmed with old lace, if it is in the family. A train is more imposing, and should come from the shoulders, but if the veil is of tulle instead of lace, that may form the train and will give a very soft appearance.

The accessories, such as slippers, stockings, gloves and bouquet, are all of white. In fact, no color of any kind is introduced, unless orange blossoms are worn. If the bride is a divorcee or a widow, she should wear a smart afternoon or traveling gown, and a hat to match. A prayer book is often carried, while a few orchids or gardenias may be pinned at the waist in place of the conventional bouquet.

The groom, ushers, and bride's escort wear the conventional afternoon costume—cutaway coat, striped trousers, white or gray four-in-hand cravat, light or dark waistcoat, as preferred, patent leather shoes and white boutonniere.

The bridesmaids are all dressed alike in any light color scheme, with hat to match. In England they often wear bands of silver or flowers in their hair. The maid of honor and flower girls are dressed differently to distinguish them, and often there is a page and a flower girl dressed in fancy costume, after Reynolds or Van Dyke, who walk together. The favorite color of the bride is usually chosen for her bridesmaids' costumes, and great individuality may be expressed in the costuming of the wedding procession.

The bride's mother wears a smart, elaborate afternoon gown of mauve or some other dignified color, and carries or wears a small bouquet to match. The groom presents his ushers and best man with some souvenir, such as a scarfpin, sleeve links, or cigarette case in memory of the day, and the bridesmaids receive something of the same from the bride. Bracelets, lockets, brooches are always charming gifts.

FOR SUMMER COSTUME

This midsummer hat is of blue straw with a charming lining of flesh-colored gossamer. A pale-blue velvet ribbon lends to the distinctness of the model and its drooping brim.

FASHION NOTES OF INTEREST

A wrap of gray crepe de chine is effectively trimmed with mink fur. The skirt edge may be finished with the new diamond-shaped scalloping. Shell, straw flowers, leather cut-outs and wooden beads trim the spring hats.

A frock of blue linen is trimmed with applique lines of a contrasting color.

A chic hat of black millan is faced with red and trimmed with burnt lace.

When stockings are worn with black slippers and with evening shoes.

A cream-colored vest of Roman silk is worn under an olive jacket of navy blue, velvet.

Parade of silk dresses are lined with chiffon and trimmed with fringe of fur.

Point shoes are trimmed with colored buttons to match one's sweater or dress.

Cherished children are effectively combined with plain children in a smart afternoon gown.

The weather varies greatly, sometimes high, sometimes low and sometimes normal.

A frock of cotton crease is trimmed with bands of cream-colored ribbon.

It seems that the added touch of stars will be in evening laughing and giggling side pants.

Every Point Everywhere.

There is a word that grows in all soils and climates, and in the last 100 years it has been the only word in the world that has been in use in every part of the world.

It is the word of the future, and it is the word of the past. It is the word of the present, and it is the word of the future.

It is the word of the future, and it is the word of the past. It is the word of the present, and it is the word of the future.

Rents High in Stone Age.

Southern California had apartment producers back in the twentieth and nineteenth centuries, according to a scientific correspondent whose investigation of the stone age dwellings, built out of solid rock, has convinced him that living up an apartment tower was a snap. At the entrance to one apartment tower he found hieroglyphics, which he has deciphered to mean the rates for apartments as follows:

One bedroom, one bath.
Two bedrooms, two baths.
Three bedrooms, three baths.
Four bedrooms, four baths.

Our correspondent figures that the stone towers show the Egyptian business had to get at the rate of one stone a day, or 32 stones a year, for the tower. The rate was the highest on the island and compared the apartment house of the time of that period.

A short distance below the entrance to the stone apartment house the professor found a huge pile of empty hollow shells, proving that the landlady did a more or less routine business.

"Fossil Reminders."

In spite of Professor rock little fossil reminders are often seen that have been called "fossil reminders." The bones of the prehistoric animals are found in the same strata as the fossils, and are often found in the same strata as the fossils.

But lately it has been suggested, in view of observations on a fossil plant in the stone valley, that the suggested impressions of the stone valley really are in the strata of the stone valley.

It has been found that after the mud has dried they exactly resemble "fossil reminders."

Brightening the Home.

A coat of stain with two coats of enamel, after the old finish has been removed, will do wonders to any old article of furniture. For paint and enamel with a durable finish, a coat of enamel will make it a thing of beauty. What could be prettier than a bedroom set stained in walnut, a bath set in a light gray, and a living room set in a light gray with a light touch of white on the legs and feet?

A bedroom set stained in oak with a cream or ivory lacquer, with either blue and yellow or orange and brown or brown and cream drapes, long curtains and a lamp and the room is just

Has Had Ten Capitals.

South Carolina has had at least ten capitals, including Milledgeville, Columbia, Charleston, Georgetown, and others. The reason for so many has been the fact that the state has been divided into ten counties, each with its own capital. At present the city of Columbia is the capital of the state.

Active Mind of Double Worth.

The blessing of an active mind, when it is in good condition, is that it can do twice as much as a mind that is not in good condition.

Cat Animals Easy to Train.

Contrary to the general idea, cats are very easy to train. They are very intelligent animals, and they can be trained to do many things.

"Lobby" and "Lobbying."

The word "lobby" is derived from the Latin "lobus," a game played with a ball. In the modern sense, it refers to a group of people who are organized to influence the action of a legislative or executive body. They are called "lobbyists" and their business is "lobbying."

A Bostonian lobbyist is a man who is organized to influence the action of a legislative or executive body. They are called "lobbyists" and their business is "lobbying."

HORSES TO BE SHOT.

When General Sherman was "marching through Georgia" December 16, 1864, to be exact—he wrote to General Grant: "I have no doubt the state of Georgia has lost by our operations 15,000 first-rate mules. . . . Great numbers of horses were shot by my orders." (Official Rebellion Records, Series 1, Vol. 44, pp. 726-7.) We can read that now without a quiver, for that was war and it was long ago. But few of us can read unmoved of the British proposition to put to death 30,000 horses in Mesopotamia, and we can well understand that the proposition causes much agitation in England, where the horse is perhaps more generally an object of interest and affection than in America. The automobile has not displaced the horse in England, and racing, riding to hounds, polo and steeplechasing are sports still pursued with undiminished enthusiasm.

A people who love horses can not calmly contemplate the cold-blooded slaughter of 30,000 of them, and the announcement made by Mr. Churchill for the British government came as a very disagreeable shock. It appears that such slaughter is the most economical and perhaps the most humane disposition possible of horses no longer needed by their British masters in a far land. Mr. Churchill explained that the military establishment in Mesopotamia had required formerly no less than 47,000 horses, but, as reorganized under present conditions, would need only 17,000. The great surplus could not be sold on the ground, and to give them gratis to the natives would sentence them to a hard life of abuse in a country where there was not much real use for them other than military. To bring them to England or to any part of Europe where they—mostly heavy draft horses—could be profitably sold and could be used would involve a freight and attendance expense far beyond what could be realized from auctions or even from private sales.

Still staggering under heavy war burdens and embarrassed by the costs of many other troubles since the great conflict, the British people are anxious to save money and to cut down government expenditures in every way possible. This explains why it is seriously proposed to save a few thousand pounds in so unwelcome a way. Relatively England is very poor as well as burdened with debt, but, even so, it is difficult to believe that a scheme so abhorrent to the instincts of the English people will be put through. Granting that the expense of bringing the horses to Europe would be too great, and that the natives of the immediate region can not be trusted to take proper care of them, it has been suggested that the otherwise doomed animals be given to the neighboring Arabs who are known to love horses and presumably would treat them well. That some such adjustment will be demanded and will be made may be regarded as reasonably probable.

WORTHY EFFORT.
While errors may have been made by agencies and individuals working to bring about better conditions for the farmer, the purpose aimed is worthy of assistance from those who by a word or suggestion can help in what is being done by the state and national governments. There is no doubt whatever that eventually some step will be taken that will bring the producer and the consumer closer together and when this is done some definite progress will be noticed. Governor Miller some time since said he believed that it was possible to establish closer relations between the farmer and the producer and his idea touched on proper storage facilities.

It will be remembered that Senator Wadsworth in an address in the western part of the state held that better schools should be opened in the farming districts and other matters considered which would induce the boys and girls to remain on the farm and not leave for the attractions of the city. Many suggestions have been made by men of prominent names and there is no denying that the trend is to help the farmer in every way possible. There are many problems to be solved but there is reason to believe that with the aid of those who have practical knowledge some good will come. It would appear as if assistance could be given by those with years of experience who have learned what is actually needed if they would contribute their suggestions to those making inquiry as to the best methods to employ. At present a legislative committee is at work to find out what the state can do to improve agricultural conditions. The committee will sit in various places during the summer and will present its report to the next legislature. The members of the committee are anxious to acquire all the information they can and they will welcome any advice that is sound and which will be helpful in the task which they have set out to perform.

The fact that the committee will hold meetings in different sections of the state to get the views of the farmer is bound to bring about some advance in farming conditions generally. The work of the committee is not to be done hurriedly, but on the contrary it is to be handled deliberately so that when the report is presented it will contain some practical suggestions. The committee will in every manner that it can, and the farmer who has a single suggestion should in duty to himself offer it either in person or by letter. By this plan the best ideas could be assembled and everybody would be a contributor. With all helping a little some improvement would be certain.

New York, June 25.—Eight men, charged with printing and selling bogus tickets to the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, are under arrest here today.

After more than a week of investigation, following the first appearance of spurious tickets at Reading, Pa., detectives landed the men they believe to be the prime movers in the counterfeiting plot in their dragnets and confiscated printing presses, ink and cardboard for the printing of the tickets. The men under arrest are: Carmine Demattio, Louis Cohen, Abraham Last, Abe Helt, Arthur Foster, Carmine Luongo, Sebastian Fagola, James Pichio. Most of the men are chauffeurs.

The men are charged with grand larceny, forgery and counterfeiting. The complainant against them is William C. Ridgeway, treasurer for Tex Rickard, promoter of the fight.

MARVELOUS SAYS CARP OF ARENA

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Jersey City, N. J., June 23.—Work on the monster arena in which Jack Dempsey will defend the world's heavyweight championship against Georges Carpentier July 2, is being rapidly rushed to completion.

The arena is a veritable ocean of lumber, with tier upon tier of benches in eight sections stretching outwards from its center where the ring will stand. The diameter of the ring is more than a city block yet those who occupy seats farthest away from the ring will be able to see the fight and the manner in which the arena is being built is unique.

Promoter Tex Rickard, with Georges Carpentier, Francois Deschamps and Governor Edwards visited the scene of battle Wednesday afternoon. Carp was visibly impressed. His face lit up in amazement at the size of the place. He spent almost an hour inspecting it and his verdict was "marvelous."

Promoter Rickard is an enthusiastic over his big arena as a boy over a Christmas tree. "What do you think of it boys?" he asked assembled scribes. "Isn't it just about the last word in the way of a fight stadium?"

"Everyone agreed that it was but someone piped: "The $5.50 seats are a long way off."

"But not too far away to see the fight," interposed Tex. "See that camera man standing up there on the rim? You can see the lens in his camera."

By the middle of next week the arena will be completed. It is being guarded night and day by special watchmen and wet down with fire hoses every night as a precaution against fire.

"What if it rains July 2. There is no protection for the fighters or the crowd," it was suggested to Rickard. "If rain interferes," he replied, "we'll have to hold the battle over until July 4."

KEEPING FIT CAMPAIGN ON

Each meeting of the "Keeping Fit" campaign is much larger and the interest greater than at the one before. This afternoon Dr. Croff gave her very instructive talk on "Keeping Fit" to an unusually large and interesting audience at West Shokan. The points brought out on the care of the eyes and the teeth, also regarding the proper shoes for women were especially noteworthy. With these Dr. Croff not only emphasized the points that many knew before, but also gave many new and important reasons why we should not neglect the care, even for a very short time, in these or any other parts of our bodies. From the very beginning of her talk, Dr. Croff's charming personalities attracted the attention of her audience and the intensely interesting and able way in which she handled her subject, held their closest attention to the very end.

Friday evening at Ellenville a meeting will be held on this same subject in the Memorial Hall beginning at 8 o'clock, daylight saving time. Every woman and all girls over 16 are invited and urged to attend.

MANIAC SLEW MRS. BARTLETT

By Telegram to The Freeman. New York, June 23.—A maniac whose distorted mind gloated upon violent death and blood, is being sought throughout the length and breadth of Long Island today following the brutal murder of Mrs. Minnie S. Bartlett, 50 year old widow of a wealthy New York merchant, in her home at West Hempstead, Long Island.

When the rushed and battered corpse was found it was believed that robbery was the motive. Later when the police found money and jewels in the house, and after the medical examiner had viewed the body the theory was advanced that the woman was killed by a madman.

Mrs. Bartlett had been shot three times and stabbed in the neck. Her left arm, both legs and face had been slashed with a keen knife or razor. Her clothing had been torn to shreds. It was evident that the woman had made a terrific struggle for her life and that the murderer had continued to rain blows upon her body even after life was extinct.

The Bartlett mansion is in an isolated district and no one has yet been found who heard any cries coming from the building.

In his wild frenzy the murderer had gone from room to room smashing furniture and tearing up clothing.

Many excellent fingerprints were obtained by the police. The murderer's hands had become covered with blood and traces of his fingers were found upon many articles in the house.

The slain woman was the second wife of George W. Bartlett. Their marriage was the result of a romance which began when Mrs. Bartlett, then a trained nurse, nursed Bartlett through an attack of illness. Mrs. Bartlett had long feared burglars and was trying to sell her home. It was feared that a rough looking, shabbily dressed man had called yesterday morning to inquire about the purchase of the place.

INDIAN STORY OF CREATION

Menabosho Made the Earth, According to the Legend—Great Lakes Are Bear Tracks.

Menabosho, according to the legend of the Chippewa Indians, was the creator of all things. He awoke one day and found that he would make the earth. But the almighty creator did not find his task easy, for he wanted to make the earth larger than any other thing. Truly he rounded the soil between his powerful hands, until it grew into a great ball, but, fired from their touch, it fell in a heap. In this way he tried again and again, each time he saw the mass crumble. Then Menabosho mixed water with the soil to form mud; and, besides, moulded it about a great rock, when behold—a still larger ball. The mass, at last, kept the chosen shape.

The creator, pausing to rest from his toil, beheld his matchless work.

Menabosho next undertook to devise the many living things which dwell on the earth. Before the surface of the giant ball had time to dry, in fact, the lusty god began to make the animals, last of which was man—began to make the animals, one kind after another, on the broad palm of his left hand. Among others he made the bears.

The first bear soon escaped from its maker. The wild beast, with its untamed strength, leaped to the earth and bounded straightaway across the continent of North America. But the land where the sprawling bear's huge paws struck the earth was still so fresh and soft that they left deep tracks. All was strangely new.

These deep marks on our continent quickly filled with water. Scarcely had the frightened bear bounded away, when the beautiful lakes—Superior, Michigan, Huron, Ontario and Erie—appeared, full to the brim. They are old as the first bear's tracks.

The creator now hastened to make rain. At sight of the water, filling the lakes, he began to fear, lest the soil again fall in a heap; and he caused the rain to fall from the sky, so long that the lakes overflowed their shores. And the water from Superior, seeking the level, flowed toward Erie, the track of the foot which struck first and settled, under the bear's weight, much lower than the others—the water, on its way to the sea dropped abruptly from Ontario into Erie. And lo! the Falls of Niagara!

The Power of Silence.

There is nothing in this world which works to greater advantage than to be silent. No one likes to be ignored. It hurts like the mischief to have an antagonist throw up a barricade against which we have no power. The moment the other fellow is silent, that minute all detailed plans of attack are worthless. The only thing one can do is to be silent also, and there you are! Though but an armistice, the action of conflict is over.

The one who refuses to converse may be one who has no use for. Still it bothers you. You are annoyed, your pride is injured at the realization that the one you hold in scorn has the opportunity to ignore you. The moment you resort to tantalizing hater you acknowledge the final defeat. If you fall in line and imitate you compliment. The secret is to steal the thunder first.

If one you love keeps silent it hurts twice. Once because you have no idea how deeply you may have offended to bring down upon your head such punishment, and again because the loved one could ignore you. Just think over the conquering points of this silent weapon.—New York Mail.

Tears Brighten the Eyes.

There is a very widespread belief that the process of crying tends to weaken the eyes and rob them of brightness. Actually, the truth lies in the opposite direction, according to an oculist.

The shedding of tears (provided that the weeping is not overdone) is one of the greatest aids to softness and brightness of the eyes.

The explanation is this: The eyes need a bath just as our bodies do. There is a certain quality in the "tear liquid" which does not exist in water, and that is why a tear bath is of much greater value than a mere bathing with cold or warm water.

There is a possibility that one of the reasons for the superiority of feminine eyes in point of limpidity and brightness over the male optics is the tendency of the weaker sex to indulge in more or less frequent outbreaks of tears.

The moral is that if you want to have what novelists call "eyes like the fishpools of Heshoon," give the eyes a tear bath at least once a week.

Railroads require that when a body is shipped to any point the undertaker shall purchase two full tickets, but it is optional whether any one accompany the body.

The following unique proposal was sent to a New York undertaker recently:

"Within the next five weeks I am due at Santa Fe, N. M., and as I understand there are times when the rear relatives of one who has passed from this world cannot come to New York to take charge of same, I hereby hold myself open at any time to his above named party to accompany said relative party to any point in the West or Southwest as a carrier of receiving any transportation to exchange for said services."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WITTY WITCH'S TALK.

"I'm glad to see you all today," said Witty Witch to the fairies and elves and brownies who came to call on her.

"Mr. Giant said that I was to give an afternoon lecture before we had tea. I don't know that anyone wants to hear a lecture, but he thought it would be a good idea. And I mean to take my own lecture to heart just as much as I mean to tell it to you."

"And anyway, at the end of the lecture we'll all have tea!"

Everyone laughed and Witty Witch continued: "You must all be proud of your country and wave your flag and rejoice that you belong to your own beloved country—but you mustn't judge every other country in the world by one or two people you may know belonging to such countries."

"Be proud of your parents and your grandparents and your ancestors, but don't spend your whole time showing their pictures in the family albums to the callers. Amount to something yourselves, too!"

"Be friendly with your neighbors, but don't think that means that you can borrow their toys or their fresh eggs without returning them, for that isn't real friendliness."

"And don't feel that when you've borrowed their matches to light your bonfires that you can keep the matches that are left in your pockets!"

"When you have snapshots of your sisters and brothers, don't take up everyone's time by showing them all. They may have sisters or brothers of their own!"

"Don't ask people questions which you wouldn't want asked of you."

"Don't ask how much others pay for their toys if you're not going to tell what you pay."

"Don't imagine that by saying a hurried good-morning to someone, you're being friendly."

"Be independent but don't be proud and haughty."

"That is all the lecture I will give," said Witty Witch, "and that is quite enough. But Mr. Giant said it was well to go over the things we must not do, every once in awhile, as well as the things we must do.

"Of course he agreed with me that the word DO was much more important than the word DON'T."

"But now we must be having tea." As Witty Witch said this, six little elves who had promised to help her with the tea came forth carrying trays with all sorts of good things to eat.

There were cookies and pastries and sandwiches and tea and little hard candies of different colors.

"Even if I did give you a lecture," said Witty Witch, "I'm going to make up for it by giving a fine tea."

"And then after tea time we're going to hear a story."

They all had a most delicious and splendid tea party, and after it was over Witty Witch told this story:

"Mr. and Mrs. Dove were very devoted and happy."

"Every day Mrs. Dove used to ask Mr. Dove if he loved her and every day Mr. Dove said that he did."

"One day though Mr. Dove said, 'You silly Mrs. Dove, of course I love you. I should think you would know that by this time.' Of course Mrs. Dove did know it, but she wanted to be told it just the same."

"But she decided she wouldn't ask him that question any more. A few days went by and she didn't ask that question. Mr. Dove became very much worried that Mrs. Dove no longer cared for him."

"Finally he could stand it no longer. 'You don't care whether I care for you or not,' he said, 'you haven't asked me in days now whether I love you or not.'"

"But you said you did," Mrs. Dove answered. 'You do, don't you?'"

"Mr. Dove stuck out his little feathered chest and said, 'Of course I do, you silly little dove. How often do I have to tell you the same thing?'" And Mrs. Dove laughed to herself for Mr. Dove liked to say that to her, but he refused answering her question as much as she insisted asking it to truth."

Something Missing.

The body of good family was shown in the editorial home to her small son. She pointed with special pride to a bust of her father.

"And that, Robbie," she said, "is your grandfather."

"Is that all there was of him?" he asked.—New York Times.

Patience.

The need for patience in our daily lives may seem to be small, but surely calls for patience are numerous enough, patience with slow-moving circumstances, with the brother who does not see truth as we see it, with the unreasonable people who must be managed, if they are to go forward at all. Last, most important of all, need patience with our blindness, easily discouraged selves. After all, it may be that from a greater height and clearer vision than ours, patience itself may show as a heroic virtue.

PHARMACISTS AT STAMFORD

Annual Convention of State Association in Session at Churchill Hall With 350 Members in Attendance.

The forty-third annual convention of the New York State Pharmaceutical Association is being held at Churchill Hall, Stamford, this week, having opened on Monday with three hundred and fifty members in attendance. Many of the members are accompanied by their wives.

Particular interest attached to discussions, both formal and informal, regarding the provisions of the Federal and state prohibition laws and regulations, which were severely criticized.

Pharmacists expressed themselves plainly as being opposed to continuation of handling of liquor under the present laws and regulations which, they said, assume that a pharmacist is in business simply for the purpose of selling liquor, principally as a bootlegger.

The prohibition idea that anything containing alcohol or that all alcohol itself is intended for beverage purposes and that the pharmacists are only waiting for a chance to sell it surreptitiously was privately denounced by pharmacists attending the convention, and their remarks in modified language found expression also in the discussion in the business sessions of the convention. Not only the Federal and state prohibition laws but also the enforcement regulations, which are more stringent, assume that the pharmacist is a bootlegger anxious to violate all laws, according to members of the association.

One prominent pharmacist of New York city said that his family had conducted a pharmacy since 1870, during which time thousands of prescriptions had been compounded. Grain alcohol is used in a large number of prescriptions and there is constant use for it in all pharmaceutical work. Up to the time that prohibition went into effect, particularly the New York state law, the particular pharmacy conducted by that family never had been without alcohol in the store, any more than it had without any of the numerous other substances used daily. The firm would as soon have thought of being without alcohol as it would of being without bi-carbonate of soda, or distilled water, or any one of a score of other simple but necessary supplies. But with the advent of prohibition and the passage of the New York state law the firm had been unable to procure the supply of alcohol it needed and had been without it for ten days to two weeks at a time.

The cause, explained the druggist, was the red-tape necessary to manufacture and procure grain alcohol. New York city druggists were required to send their applications to Albany, where they were held up for ten days to two weeks. Then when they finally received their permits they found they were unable to procure alcohol because the distillers of alcohol had been held up by prohibition officials and had not received their permits. Then when the distillers were ready to make the shipment or delivery, the railroads or express companies found that their permits had not been received from the prohibition enforcement officials.

Prohibition officials, said the pharmacist, seemed to act as though every pharmacist was using alcohol for beverage purposes for his customers, with the result that work in the pharmacy was delayed and no pharmacist was certain that he was obeying the law at any time no matter how careful he was in the use of alcohol. The same attitude, he said, had been taken in pre-prohibition days by internal revenue regulations and officials. And the prohibitionists who were aware of these conditions fully approved of them, said the pharmacist, on the ground that the procurement of alcohol for any purpose should be made as difficult as possible because of the chance that it might be used for beverage purposes, which was contrary to the letter and spirit of both the Volstead Act and the state law which Governor Miller had favored. The general prohibition attitude was that anyone handling alcohol at any time was using legitimate business as a cloak for bootlegging.

The discussion led to the adoption of recommendations of a special committee of five members from Greater New York that druggists co-operate with the excise officials in the enforcement of the law and the elimination of the few who use their permits to dispose of large quantities of liquor.

A proposition was discussed as to recommendations for the establishment of government dispensaries which should handle all liquor to be furnished on physicians' prescriptions, and the modification of laws and regulations so as to permit pharmacists to handle alcohol in their legitimate business.

The convention opened Monday with the registration of members and on Monday evening there was a general "get-together" and "talkfest." Tuesday evening a banquet was tendered the members of the association and their wives by H. H. Mase, manager of Churchill Hall, which is the headquarters of the association and where the sessions are being held. The menu was elaborate and at the close of the dinner the members of the association were welcomed by Judge McNaught of Stamford, and addresses were made by several members.

Wednesday morning the townspeople of Stamford offered their automobiles to members and their wives for a motoring trip and in the evening there was an old fashioned minstrel show given by the Traveling Men's Auxiliary. This afternoon a baseball game was played and tonight there will be an old fashioned barn dance. The convention will close Friday afternoon. Action on a number of matters, including the prohibition matters, was to be taken this afternoon.

Federal and state legislators who were bulldozed by the Anti-Saloon League into passing the present prohibition legislation would have been interested at least in some of the remarks regarding their action in regulating, without any study, the pharmaceutical business which they require the people who conduct it to study for a certain period and who must obtain a diploma and license before they can practice it.

Nearly seven hundred uniformed policemen, under three inspectors, four captains and fifty sergeants, were stationed for three blocks on each side of the pier when Admiral William Swenson Sims arrived in New York on the S. S. Olympic. The admiral, unaccompanied, got into an automobile and was whisked to his hotel. Swenson in New York's history has been seen such a demonstration display of police strength to greet an American citizen. As a result, the spirits of the Irish sympathizers and the admiral's friends, who had planned demonstrations, were apparently dampened that only a scattering of men were in the streets leading to the dock. None got through the police lines. The above photograph of the admiral and Mrs. Sims in civilian clothes, was made when the New York docked.

CARPENTIER RESUMES WORK

By James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world.
(Copyright 1921 by International News Service.)
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, June 23.—Attempts to size up Georges Carpentier by the showing of any of his sparring partners are unfair to the French champion as I see it.

I noticed where the Journee-Weinert bout was mentioned in this connection but I can't see for the life of me why Journee's showing should have anything to do with Carpentier or his chances against Jack Dempsey.

Carpentier can stop Journee in one punch any time he wants to. He simply uses the big fellow to rough it with him. He lets Journee and all the rest of his sparring mates hammer him about the ring for he needs that kind of work.

If he didn't want Journee to hit him, take it from me, the big fellow wouldn't be able to lay a glove on Georges.

Joe Jeanette is the only one of Carpentier's sparring mates who has class enough to begin to make the French brawler use his ring science but you never see this done in Georges's public workouts because it isn't his idea. Carpentier feels that he has been subjected to a lot of unjust criticism because of his system of training and he has had this impression for so long a time that he went into his shell farther than ever. That's one reason why he has constantly refused to show more than a flash of his real ability.

Today real training activities were resumed at Manhasset after a two-day lay off with the exception of road work which Georges did Tuesday and Wednesday. The allight rest was a welcome one to Carpentier but with just ten days remaining between now and the date when he will step into the ring at Jersey City the French title-holder will whip things up.

I got the idea of what Georges intends to do from a remark dropped inadvertently by Joe Jeanette yesterday. "Been takin' it easy for a couple of days," said Jeanette, "but Georges will give us plenty to do from now on."

Flowers Not for Sick Room.
All flowers grown from bulbs are dangerous in rooms where there is illness. Although bunches of flowers are invariably taken to the sick, such blooms as hyacinths, lilies-of-the-valley, tuberoses, and even daffodils and narcissus, should be carefully avoided. The perfume is said to be as dangerous to a person in a critical state of health as a dose of morphine would be, without possessing the benefits which that drug sometimes confers.

GEORGES' FRIEND SIZES UP JACK

(By Sid Mercer.)
By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Atlantic City, N. J., June 23.—Standing on a dusty beam in the hot, stuffy aeroplane shed back of Jack Dempsey's training quarters at Airport, Pierre Mallet, close friend and advisor of Georges Carpentier, watched the champion perspire through forty minutes of bag punching and boxing.

Mallet is Carpentier's boon companion at Manhasset. He is a brother of Captain Thierry Mallet and arrived in this country several weeks ago. He is about Georges's age and they have been buddies for more than ten years. He is from one of the first families of France, highly educated and speaks perfect English. In fact he could pass anywhere for an Englishman.

Georges's young friend came down here, not as a spy, for there is no attempt to maintain secrecy at Airport, but to see for himself what sort of a man the champion is. He rode out to the camp with Jim Corbett, greeted newspaper men cordially and had nothing but praise for Dempsey. Mallet was duly impressed with Jack's left hand even before he pulled on a boxing glove.

"He is very strong," commented the French visitor, "and a perfect specimen of American."

Mallet's vigilant eye missed nothing, and when Dempsey had finished he said:

"He's splendid. While, of course, I think Georges is the better boxer I find Dempsey a more shifty boxer than I had been led to expect. He is by no means slow and I can see he is a puncher with either hand."

"Do you think Carpentier will win?" piped an interviewer.
"Certainly," Mallet replied. "You know he has met big, strong fellows before. Beckett is a harder hitter and not a bad boxer, but Georges brought him down. I have seen Carpentier in every bout he has had since 1911 with the exception of that against Levinisky. Many times he has gone into the ring against heavy odds and surmounted them. I think he will find a way to defeat your great champion, who is undoubtedly the best man he has ever been matched with in the heavyweight class."

"One thing is certain: both men will be in superb condition. I know Georges was never better. We have heard conflicting reports on Dempsey but if I am a judge I am sure he is in great form."
"We have never underestimated Dempsey but you must remember that Carp can also hit a terrible blow. Dempsey counts on getting to Georges with heavy body punches but he will find a fast, shifty boxer in front of him and may not find it easy to assimilate the punches Georges is able to put over. Georges is absolutely confident that he will win. He doesn't say so but I have yet to hear him express a doubt. I anticipate that the coming bout will be the fastest ever fought by heavyweights."

BIG INDIAN.
Big Indian, May 23.—Miss Frances Bryant left town Sunday morning for a two weeks vacation. Part of the time she will spend at Radin, and the remainder, camping with her former Camp Fire Group, on the Susquehanna.

Mrs. G. H. Shaver and son, Richard of Livingston Manor are visiting Mrs. Addison Haynes.

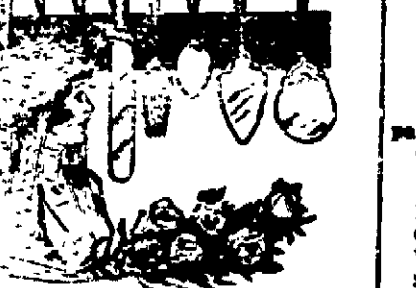

The McKinnis family are expected to arrive Friday evening for the summer.

Miss Evadine Todd, of Senger, arrived in town Wednesday afternoon, to spend a few days with Miss Mildred L. Garrison.

Last Night's Fights.
By Telegraph to The Freeman.

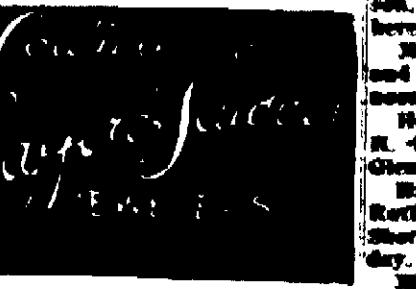

At Cleveland—Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul, scored a technical knock-out over Willie Meehan, San Francisco, when Referee Mattinkel stopped the fight in the first round after Meehan had been scored three times.

At New York—Bud Ridley, California bantam, defeated Eddie Fletcher in a 12 round bout.

BRIDES

Just to think that of all the friends a bride may have who bring her gifts, only those who choose silver will perpetuate the memory of their friendship in a form that will be eagerly welcomed and treasured as an heirloom by two or more generations. It is a satisfaction to give silver. It is a gift that lasts. Choose a piece worthy of your friendship.

NAVY'S OARSMAN ROW TO VICTORY

First at the start, first at the finish, and first at every other stage of the three mile struggle—that was the achievement of a stalwart, powerful Navy crew in the big race of the intercollegiate regatta on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie Wednesday evening. Rowing as few other eights had rowed in the classic, the midshipmen made their journey down the river into the gathering shadows one of startling triumph.

For the Navy not only won but it gained the goal of its ambitions by a margin of more than five lengths. For two miles the varsity contest was a stirring duel between the Navy and Cornell, challenge and counter-challenge, sprint matched by sprint, with Cornell hopes still running high. But once past the bridge and into the final mile, the midshipmen proved that there was not another eight in this country which could cope with it this day.

Then came the real battle of the evening, a gruelling, heart testing fight between California and Cornell for second place. And when the line had been crossed California had gained the honor by only three feet. That battle for second honors was every bit as fascinating and pulse quickening as the memorable sprint in which a great Stanford crew almost caught a winning Cornell eight in a race of races in 1915. Pennsylvania was fourth, Syracuse fifth and the heretofore unbeaten Columbia crew sixth and last.

The Navy's time was 14 minutes and 7 seconds—very fast. Until the big race came along and the Navy and California shattered the hopes of the Ithacans the day was one of wild exultation for Cornellians. They went into the varsity event with visions of an old time Cornell triumph, nothing less than a sweep of the river, after the famed manner of the Courtney crews of old. For previous to the major contest Cornell won both the freshmen and junior varsity events over two mile courses.
